CANNED SEAFOOD

BY CHEF ANTONIO

We have all come home after a busy day and realized we haven't gone shopping for a few days, looked in the pantry, and seen nothing but a few cans in a back corner. Don't despair, if you've stocked up on canned fish, you'll be fine.

Canned fish has been around since the mid 1800's. When refrigeration wasn't available, it allowed for storage of surplus harvest and the ability to transport fish further than ever before. Like all seafood, when choosing canned fish always look for sustainable fisheries. Production and consumption of canned fish is a global affair. So many countries will have preferred fish and canning methods.

Tuna in water or oil? Sardines in oil or all sorts of tomato products? Experiment with different countries of origin to see what your favourite might be. No matter what, look for Oceanwise, Marine Stewardship Council and other organizations for a guarantee that only what fisheries can be safely maintained for the future have been harvested.

The uses for canned fish are as diverse as anything. When thinking canned fish, don't be trapped by your sad memory of that tuna sandwich prepared by your best friend's aunty while growing up. It may have left you never wanting canned tuna ever again, but I promise there's so much better out there. Salmon, tuna, sardines, mackerel and anchovies are some of the most common canned fish. They're all convenient, economic, nutritionally dense and loaded with omega-3, vitamin d, b12 and even calcium.

To start, the thousands of canned fish salads you can create are truly endless.

Please don't stop at mayo, onion and celery. Venture into extra virgin olive oils or other healthy oils, and different vegetables like fennel, or asparagus.

Why not arugula, boiled potatoes and canned beans? Make canned fish into patties to be baked, pan fried or even grilled.

Delicious canned fish sauces, hot or cold, are perfect to toss on your freshly cooked rice, noodles or pasta. Why not fill dumplings or make casseroles? How about try stuffing all sorts of vegetables and mushrooms to be baked, then eaten hot or cold?

This time, don't be discouraged by discovering some canned fish in your pantry, but embrace and fully discover this great source of protein.

It's time to get the can opener.

CANNED SEAFOOD QUICK FACTS

• Canned fish can be found in various preparations, including packed in water, oil, or sauces. Some canned fish may also be smoked or flavored with herbs and spices for added taste.

• Canned fish comes in various types, including tuna, salmon, sardines, mackerel, anchovies, and herring.

• Canned fish has a long shelf life, typically ranging from one to five years, depending on the type of fish and processing method.

4 Creative Ways to Upcycle Food and Reduce Waste

By: The Choices Nutrition Team

In a world where food waste is a significant problem, upcycling offers a fantastic solution that's both eco-friendly and wallet-friendly. Here are four simple yet effective tips to upcycle food products and promote a healthier lifestyle:

1. Soup Stock Stash: Next time you're chopping up vegetables for a meal, don't discard the trimmings. Instead, collect them in a container in your freezer to make homemade vegetable stock later. Carrot ends, celery leaves, onion skins, and herb stems all work well in a homemade stock!

2. Save Those Bread Ends: Stale bread doesn't have to be destined for the trash. Give it new life by transforming it into homemade breadcrumbs. Simply toast the bread until crisp, then pulse it in a food processor until finely ground. Alternatively chop and freeze the ends to use for homemade bread and butter pudding.

3. Regrow Your Scraps: Did you know that you can regrow certain vegetables from their scraps? Save the ends of green onions, lettuce, celery, and leeks, and place them in water or soil to encourage regrowth. With a bit of patience and care, you can enjoy a continuous supply of fresh greens without having to buy them any time soon.

4. Freeze for Later: Fruits can be sliced and frozen for smoothies or turned into homemade popsicles. Leftover cooked grains and beans can be portioned into freezer bags for quick and easy meal prep. Even fresh herbs can be chopped and frozen in ice cube trays with a bit of olive oil for later use in cooking. Freezing allows you to preserve food at its peak freshness, reducing waste and ensuring you always have healthy options on hand.

By implementing these simple upcycling tips into your routine, you can reduce food waste and promote a healthier lifestyle for yourself and the planet. Get creative in the kitchen and let nothing go to waste!

A GUIDE TO CHOOSING SUSTAINABLE FISH AND SEAFOOD

By: The Choices Nutrition Team

Looking to choose more sustainable fish and seafood options? Here are some quick tips to help you help our aquaculture.

1. Choose varieties that are more abundant and more resilient to overfishing like certain species of shellfish. Check out the Ocean Wise website to learn more about which shellfish species are more sustainable.
2. Send your comments to our team by heading to the Contact Us page at our website, Choices.Market/contact-us to get more information about choosing sustainable fish and seafood options.
3. Remember, both wild and farmed options can be sustainable. It is all about the farming practices of each specific fishery.
4. Look for the Ocean Wise symbol on products. The Ocean Wise certification is based on the latest scientific research to recommend sustainable seafood choices to companies that partner with them. At Choices, all our fresh fish and seafood products bear the Ocean Wise symbol to show our commitment to sustainability.

Elevate Your Plate: 10 Savvy Tips For Sustainable Dining

By: The Choices Nutrition Team

In today's world, where wellness and environmental consciousness intertwine, making mindful choices about what we eat isn't just about personal health—it's about the health of our planet too. If you're eager to nourish your body and do your best to eat more sustainably here are ten tips to help you elevate your plate and make sustainable dining a delicious adventure:

1. Plant-Power Prevails: Embrace the vibrant world of plant-based delights!

From succulent veggies to grains and protein-packed legumes and tofu, increasing the consumption of these plant-based foods tend to be lighter on the environment. So, go ahead, savor that rainbow salad or whip up a mouthwatering chickpea curry—Mother Earth will thank you!

2. Local Love Affair: Fall head over heels for local farmers and products!

By supporting local producers, you're not only reducing food miles but also cultivating a deeper connection to your community and its culinary treasures.

4. Waste Not, Want Not: Turn kitchen scraps into culinary triumphs and bid farewell to food waste woes!

Whether it's crafting a delectable veggie broth from leftover scraps or transforming yesterday's dinner into today's gourmet delight, embracing the art of repurposing is a deliciously sustainable choice.

4. Seafood Sensibility: Dive into the deep blue with sustainable seafood choices. By opting for responsibly sourced options like certified Ocean Wise fish and seafood, you're not just pleasing your taste buds but also safeguarding our oceans for generations to come.

5. Label Love: Decode the language of eco-labels and certifications, and let your conscience be your guide.

Whether it's Fair Trade coffee, or Buy BC foods, these labels are your passport to choosing more sustainable products.

6. Packaging Perfection: Say goodbye to excess packaging and hello to eco-chic alternatives!

Seek out products with minimal or recyclable packaging, or better yet, embrace the bulk-buying revolution and revel in the joy of waste-free living.

7. Green Thumb Glory: Cultivate your own edible garden and bask in the glory of homegrown goodness!

Whether it's a sprawling garden or a cozy balcony plot, growing your own food is not just a hobby—it's a way to help support local agricultural practices.

8. Reuseable Bags: Yes, many of us are using reusable bags now when shopping at the grocery store but have you considered other ways to reduce your plastic consumption? Look for things like reusable produce bags or choosing products that use less plastic and more recyclable packaging.

9. Brand Brilliance: Champion brands that share your passion for sustainability and let your shopping cart reflect your values. By supporting eco-conscious companies, you're not just buying products—you're investing in a brighter, greener future.

10. Spread The Word: Share your sustainable dining adventures far and wide, and let your passion inspire others to join the movement. Whether it's hosting a plant-based potluck or starting a community garden, together, we can turn the tables on food sustainability!

So, let your plate be your canvas, and let sustainability be your muse. With these ten tips as your trusty guide, every meal becomes a delicious celebration of health, flavor, and planet-friendly goodness. Cheers to nourishing both body and Earth—one delectable bite at a time!

ORGANIC TRADITIONS SPROUTED

Did you know ground flax and chia are good sources of Omega 3s? It can be tricky to meet your Omega 3 needs which are vital for your brain health. Try Organic Traditions Sprouted Super Food Grains like their Organic Sprouted flax powder and Sprouted Chia in yogurt, cereal, smoothies and your favourite homemade baked goods recipes to help you get the Omega boost you need!

KALE

Kale is in season right now! Yup were talking, green, purple, black and rainbow, all the varieties! Further, kale is a good source of important vitamins and minerals like vitamin K, C and potassium. But how can you use kale other than just a salad (still a great option though!).

Try using a handful of kale in your smoothies, chopped up and put in savoury pancakes with green onion or chopped into a homemade pesto! Bonus Myers' Farm is bringing organic kale and chard this month to Choices!

RADISHES

Radishes are our spicy seasonal root vegetable! This often-forgotten vegetable is a great addition to add more seasonal, less expensive produce to your summer meals. Try peeling, slicing, and soaking them in any ice water bath to remove some of the spiciness. Some of our favourite ways to enjoy them: thinly sliced on a salad, pickled or baked and roasted with potatoes.

TANITABS are formulated with nano-hydroxyapatite (nHAP), which makes up as much as 97% of our tooth enamel and up to 60% of human bones.

nHAP is an ideal and non-toxic alternative to fluoride since it consists of a biocompatible substance that is recognized and accepted by the body. Our nHAP is vegan and not sourced from cow bones

While fluoride helps remineralize teeth with saliva, nHAP directly remineralizes teeth on its own. In other words, it fills in microscopic fissures in the enamel and replaces minerals lost over time, working to thus strengthen teeth and prevent cavities.

It is also effective at helping restore the natural whiteness and smooth surface of teeth with extremely low abrasive qualities

Working for happier oceans one smile at a time without any plastic waste. With vegan nHAP, organic xylitol, and plant extracts for a powerful clean and effective protection. TANITABS are formulated with nano-hydroxyapatite (nHAP), which makes up as much as 97% of our tooth enamel and up to 60% of human bones.
